Cardinal Luis Antonio Tagle has been archbishop of Manila since 2011. After being ordained a priest in 1982, he held pastoral and teaching positions, and from 1985 to 1991 studied at The Catholic University of America, gaining S.T.L. and S.T.D. degrees.

Returning to the Philippines, he again had parish responsibilities. In 2001 he became bishop of Imus, serving additionally as rector of the seminary there from 2002 to 2011, all while being engaged in theological teaching and, increasingly, in the work of the Federation of Asian Bishops’ Conferences.
